

Making the Case for Health Equity

NYS Tobacco Control Professional Development Institute Phase 1

Day One: March 4, 2020

The goal of these two-day trainings is to motivate and prepare grantees to apply an equity framework when implementing public health interventions. This will be accomplished by providing factual historical and current information about racism and its impact on racial and ethnic disparities in health, housing, employment and other quality of life indicators. While the focus of these two days is health equity, there will be an intentional focus on race due to the belief that structural racism is at the core of health disparities. Through a variety of different training modalities and thought-provoking presentations, participants will be encouraged to challenge their personal ideas, values, stereotypes and assumptions that shape how they view the world, interact with others and engage in public health practice.
